

Information on Infection protection on stand areas

Dear exhibitors,

We have compiled some recommendations for the design, construction and organisation of exhibition stands. Please decide individually based on your stand concept how you will meet the requirements for infection control.

Deutsche Messe AG does not issue any planning approvals regarding to infection control, so you are responsible for your stand area. Third parties employed by you must be obliged by you to comply with infection control requirements.

Stands should be designed in such a way that a distance of 1.50 m between persons (minimum distance) can be maintained. Therefore, if possible, dimension accessible areas on stand surfaces so that people can stay and move around there comfortably. In order to avoid backlogs in the hall aisles, please plan sufficient space on your stand area. As a matter of principle, it is compulsory to wear a respiratory protection mask (FFP2 or KN95 standard, without exhalation valve) in all enclosed spaces. The removal of the mask is permissible on scene areas for persons giving presentations; at the seating area if this minimum distance is not only temporarily maintained or if barriers are provided to protect against aerosols by design.

A group of persons who are close to each other (e.g. persons from a household, a travel group, etc.) may remove the mask even if the minimum distance at the seat is not observed.

Please ensure good ventilation; especially where closed stand ceilings are installed. Surfaces and objects that are frequently touched should be cleaned regularly.

We recommend that disinfectants are available at central points throughout the event and that a few spare masks are kept on hand.

In case of changes to the legal situation or the acquisition of new knowledge from operational practice, both Deutsche Messe's hygiene and infection protection concept and this information will be updated. Please check whether the planning of your trade fair appearance complies with the current hygiene regulations. We have included a link to the Hygiene and Infection Protection Concept in its current form below.
